Description:

Restless leg is also known as Willis-Ekbom disease and it is characterized by an uncontrollable urge to move the legs. This involuntary leg movement can be mild or severe but are usually worse in the evening and at night. Some may experience this leg spasms daily while it will occur occasionally for others. The reason for the legs moving at night is linked to the fall in dopamine levels. Evidence suggests the damage of the basal ganglia in the brain is the cause of restless leg syndrome.
