Description:

Postnuptial agreements are agreements between spouses that are entered into after they are already married to settle things like division of assets, debt allocation, and spousal support if the couple decides to divorce. People often wonder why couples would enter into a postnuptial agreement after they are already married and do not have any immediate plans to divorce, but Westlake Village family law attorneys understand that entering into a postnuptial agreement is often a good step for people to protect themselves and their assets.
