Description:

In order to combat seeing the "same thing wrapped up in a different bow" trap, be sure to find eclectic choreographers with distinctly different styles for your performers so the dancer has variety in their solos and demonstrates a wide variety of movement. Now, that's impressive to see. If a dancer can morph themselves stylistically, it showcases a maturity and understanding of nuance and interpretation of an individual choreographer's unique language and movement profile. Remember, there is no need for anyone to see a dancer do three contemporary solos that basically looks like the one they just performed an hour ago. I don't care how talented the dancer is. Again, think about variety. Can you present your da...
