Description:

This is an exceptional 1985 FERRARI Mondial Quattroavole Cabriolet. A very late model production of the rarest version of the Mondial with only 629 hand built units produced. It holds the distinction of being the only four seat, mid-rear engine, convertible automobile ever manufactured in regular production. The engine is mounted behind the passenger compartment, moving the weight distribution rearward and closer to the drive axle. That's a boon from an acceleration standpoint and getting the power down, but it's also about cornering. With the weight concentrated around the middle of the car, it makes it very nimble and reduces overall mass, and with the engine closer to the transmission and rear drive wheels ...
